21st Century Learner

The learner is at the center or hub of the network (school/teachers, community, peers, family, personal learning network, online/virtual learning, experts and specialists, global community, and blogs/social media). All parts of the network would be utilized and leveraged with technology as the means by which the learner connects with the network. A recursive relationship of consuming and producing exists between the learner and the network. The learner is both consuming or integrating with all of these elements and producing/generating with an impact on the network. Through reflecting, question, thinking, analyzing, generating, and innovating the learner will communicate, collaborate, create, connect, contribute, care, captivate, and challenge.